Welcome

GILLIAN CHURCHILL
CEO, Movement to Work

Welcome to the 2022 Movement to Work Youth Employability Awards!

Tonight is an opportunity to celebrate the achievements of our network; our employers, our partners and most significantly, young people across the country who have been particularly extraordinary as they embark on their career journey.

At Movement to Work, we are focused on levelling the playing field for young people who face significant barriers to work, working hard to deliver opportunities to help young people into employment and ensuring those who are furthest from the job market have access to these opportunities.

We're proud that we've helped to deliver more than 137,000 work placements across the UK. However there's no room for complacency. Working side by side with our network of employers, training providers, youth outreach partners and Government, we must continue to work together to unlock the potential of young people up and down the country, to make a positive and lasting impact to their lives.

We've had an overwhelming response to our call for nominations, testament to the passion and drive of everyone across The Movement. To all our nominees – congratulations and good luck!

If you are an organisation who would like to get involved or have ideas that will help more young people enter the world of work, please get in touch. The Movement to Work team is always ready to listen, help and support.

Have a fantastic evening.

OLLY BENZECRY

Chair & Trustee,
Movement To Work

Welcome to this day of discussion, reflection and celebration!

With youth unemployment nearly three times higher than the UK national average, it's incredibly important to provide support to young people, particularly those who need help to get in to work. We must continue to provide opportunities which equip them with the experience, skills and confidence required to enter the workplace, setting them up for future success.

Movement to Work exists to help young people who are not in education, employment or training to fulfil their potential by offering them a route to sustainable employment. For employers, it's an opportunity to help tackle skill requirements, build a more diverse talent pipeline, and deliver significant social value.

Currently, over 50 per cent of individuals who take the Movement to Work opportunity move into meaningful employment or into education. While this is positive, there is more we can do. By working together, we can offer even more opportunities to those that need the Movement's help and make a real difference to their lives.

We've seen first-hand that providing opportunities which break the 'no experience, no job cycle' can be truly transformational. A big thank you to our employers, training providers and youth outreach partners for your continued support and commitment.

Have a great time. I hope to meet as many of you as possible.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'O. Benzecry'.

Meet your Host

GEMMA CAIRNEY

A former stylist to Florence + the Machine, Gemma became best known as host of the Radio 1 Weekend Breakfast Show, a job she described as one 'massive conversation' with her listeners. She has since left the music station and pursued other passions including writing, theatre and podcasts. Gemma hosts the BBC Radio 4 show The Sound Odyssey, where she travels with British artists to other countries to collaborate with local musicians. Moving away from the pop station's core focus, Gemma has fronted documentaries including What the F: the Story of Feminism, Bruising Silence, and Mali Music which saw her travel to Mali to explore the effects an Islamic extremist ban on music was having.

Having started her own production company, one of its first successes was an Edinburgh Fringe play, My Beautiful Black Dog. Gemma's first book, Open: A Toolkit for How Magic and Messed Up Life Can Be offers down-to-earth advice on mental health, families and assorted challenges life throws at young people.

Before Radio 1 Gemma hosted the weekday afternoon show on Radio 1Xtra, for which she was Sony-nominated as Best Music Radio Personality. She hosted programmes on Radios 2, 3, 4 and 6Music and was also a regular guest on Radio 1's Sunday-night Surgery and a part of BBC's annual Glastonbury TV coverage. First seen on television presenting Big Brother's Big Ears and as a roving reporter for Frocks Away with Alexa Chung, Gemma also presented a documentary on the London riots and has been a guest panellist on Free Speech.

YOUTH
EMPLOYABILITY

Awards 2022

Why are the Awards important?

The Movement to Work Youth Employability Awards recognise the outstanding contribution made by individuals and organisations over the year to our purpose: supporting young people into employment.

This year we have received numerous nominations across all categories and read some truly inspiring stories. It's incredible to see how much good work is going on throughout our network in all corners of the country.

Thank you to everyone who took the time to submit nominations - we were honoured to hear about your work and your journeys.

Judging

The nominations have been judged by Movement to Work leadership and Steering Group members, and two young people who have previously gone through Movement to Work programmes and so have insight into what constitutes exceptional performance.

Huge thank you to our judges for giving up their time:

- Ed Petter, Group Corporate Affairs Director, BT
- Kevin Rowan, Head of Organising, Services and Learning, TUC
- Tristram Roberts, Group HR Director, Barclays
- Gillian Churchill, CEO, MtW
- Oly Benzecry, Chair & Trustee, MtW

2020 young award winners:

- Rob O'Connor, Senior Analyst, Accenture
- Zoha Khan, IT Sourcing Assisting Manager, Unilever

Why do we do it?

Celebrate

The remarkable individuals and organisations across the network who have been particularly extraordinary. Whether you're an employer, trainer, or charity - you've had a significant impact and we want to recognise your efforts! And if you're a young person, you've bravely entered the workplace and your determination has been noticed!

After so much social hardship, we think its important to take the time to reflect on all that has been achieved and remind the network why our work matters.

Demonstrate

The power of quality employability programmes in driving positive outcomes for young people trying to find work and for businesses looking to diversify their workforce and give back to their communities.

Generate

Increased support and raised awareness for Movement to Work and our collaborative efforts to drive more support and the growth of the network.
